FIFTH SUNDAY OF EASTER

The vine and the branches, alongside the Shepherd comparison in chapter 10, this is the other significant Johannine instance of parabolic allegorical language. In the Old Testament Israel is frequently pictured as God's choice vine or vineyard, nurtured with consummate care only to yield bitter fruit. We have seen Jesus replacing Jewish institutions and feast; now he portrays himself as the vine of the New Israel. As branches united to him, Christians will bear fruit pleasing to God the vinedresser. Although the vine will not wither and fail, branches will fall and have to be removed and burned. Some would compare this image to the Christian community to Paul's image of the body of Christ; but while Paul's imagery is invoked to regulate the relation of Christians to each other, John's imagery is concerned only with their indwelling in Jesus. As part of his comments on the image, Jesus proclaims again his commandment: "Love one another as I have loved you". That love includes a willingness to lay down one's life for others.

EL QUINTO DOMINGO DE PASCUA

La vid y las ramas, junto a la comparación de pastores en el capítulo 10, esta es la otra instancia joánica significativa de la lengua alegórica parabólica. En el Antiguo Testamento, Israel es frecuentemente representado como la vid o viñedo de Dios, alimentado con un cuidado consumado, sólo para producir frutos amargos. Hemos visto a Jesús sustituyendo las instituciones judías y la fiesta; ahora se retrata a sí mismo como la vid del nuevo Israel. Como ramas Unidas a él, los cristianos darán frutos agradables a Dios el viñador. Aunque la vid no se marchitará y fallará, las ramas caerán y tendrán que ser quitadas y quemadas. Algunos compararían esta imagen con la comunidad cristiana con la imagen de Pablo del cuerpo de Cristo; pero mientras que las imágenes de Pablo se invocan para regular la relación de los cristianos entre sí, las imágenes de Juan sólo se refieren a su morada en Jesús. Como parte de sus comentarios sobre la imagen, Jesús proclama de nuevo su mandamiento: "amaros los unos a los otros como yo los he amado". Ese amor incluye la voluntad de dar la vida de uno para los demás.
