Fifth Sunday of Easter

In initial sections of the Last Supper, chapter 13, John's narrative has parallels to Synoptics material where at table Jesus talks about Judas and there of afterwards warns that Simon Peter will deny him three times. Yet in place of Jesus' words over the bread and wine, John has the washing of the disciples' feet, a loving act of abasement that serves as an example for his disciples. Also unique to John is the presence of the disciple whom Jesus loved. Acting as an intermediary for Simon Peter, who is placed at a distanced from Jesus, this Beloved Disciple leans back against Jesus' chest to ask the identity of the one who will give Jesus over. Mentioned only in the Book of Glory, characteristically the Beloved Disciple is close to Jesus and contrasted with Peter.

After Judas has gone out into the night, symbolic of Satanic darkness, John supplies a short introduction to the Last Discourse as Jesus speaks once more of his coming glorification and issues his new commandment: "As I love you, so you too must love one another". this is new not because the O.T. was lacking in love but because there are now two peculiarly Christian modifications. The love is to be empowered and modeled on the way Jesus manifested love for his disciples by dying and rising for them, and it is a love to be extended to one's fellow Christian disciples.

Quinto Domingo de Pascua

En las secciones iniciales de la Última Cena, capítulo 13, la narrativa de Juan tiene paralelos con el material sinóptico donde, en la mesa, Jesús habla sobre Judas y luego advierte que Simón Pedro lo negará tres veces. Sin embargo, en lugar de las palabras de Jesús sobre el pan y el vino, Juan lava los pies de los discípulos, un acto amoroso de humillación que sirve de ejemplo para sus discípulos. También única para Juan es la presencia del discípulo a quien Jesús amó. Actuando como un intermediario para Simón Pedro, quien se encuentra a una distancia de Jesús, este Amado Discípulo se apoya en el pecho de Jesús para pedirle la identidad a quien le entregará a Jesús. Mencionado solo en el Libro de Gloria, característicamente el discípulo amado está cerca de Jesús y en contraste con Pedro.

Después de que Judas haya salido a la noche, símbolo de la oscuridad satánica, Juan proporciona una breve introducción al Último Discurso mientras Jesús habla una vez más de su próxima glorificación y emite su nuevo mandamiento: "Como te amo, también tú debes amar a uno. otro". esto es nuevo no porque la O.T. Carecía de amor pero porque ahora hay dos modificaciones peculiarmente cristianas. El amor debe ser fortalecido y modelado de la manera en que Jesús manifestó amor por sus discípulos al morir y resucitar por ellos, y es un amor que se extiende a los demás discípulos cristianos.
