Year of Mercy Corner

In trying to practice mercy in our lives, actually, in trying to practice anything, it helps to take inventory of the assumptions we make. When it comes to mercy, many might often think it something more like pity and only a practice alongside others we Christians take part in. This revelation in Jesus' story, however, tell quite a different story. Mercy is not pity, but a yearning within the heart of God for His children and far from being one approach or activity among others, mercy is the way God approaches us in sin. What a beautiful thing His mercy is!

Dearest family,

One of the most touching and powerful revelations of God's mercy is in the Prodigal Son story in the Gospel of Luke. Part of its power lies in the fact that the story reveals God's multifaceted and layered mercy which is so much more extensive than charity work. A tireless and supernatural hope is portrayed by a father who for all intensive purposes has lost his son with little hope for reconciliation. The amazement we feel reading this parable is that the father never once treats his son like a probation officer or debt collector, but a parent rooting for his own to return to him. To add to this story's power is the fact that Jesus is the one telling it. He is not telling us a story to make us feel better or daydream of the perfect love which may or may not exist. Jesus is authoritatively teaching us about how God views us, yearns to save us, and forever loves us. As a challenge to every reservation we have against accepting God's love for ourselves or others, as a contrary statement to every petty attribute we project on God, this story stands as a testament. Give it a read, dear parishioners, whether it's for the second time for the 100th time, this story will change your life and probably others as well.

In His joy,

Rev. Fr. Daniel J. Gutierrez
