ST. PHILOMENA ADORATION CHAPEL

Liturgical Tidbits

On this day when we focus on the Real Presence of Our Lord in Eucharist it may be helpful to go over a common misunderstanding when it comes to gestures of reverence. If Our Lord is present in a church's sanctuary (usually behind the altar or nearby) then we should genuflect when entering the church and leaving. If the Blessed Sacrament is not present in a church or worship space, then one should bow only to the altar.

To all our parishioners who so lovingly showed their support and to my family members who came (from many places) to join in the celebration of my milestones. The thing is that none of these milestones would have been possible or as blessed without any of my family or the community (my church family). I thank you all and know that my heart is filled with gratitude for all of your support now and throughout the years. God bless you all.

FROM THE PASTOR'S

DESK

Dear family,

While there are plenty of serious moments (to be expected) in the life of a priest, there are also some quite humorous ones as well. I will never forget one particular Mass at my previous assignment. During a daily Mass it came time to distribute communion and I started to realize that I had more people in the chapel than hosts in the ciborium (metal container for hosts). I decided at that point to start breaking the hosts in half and sure enough it seemed it would do the "trick." Just as I was finishing giving communion to the faithful, one woman after receiving the broken hosts became upset and exclaimed quite loudly, "Hey, I want the whole thing." Aside from the humor of the situation, there are many implications to what she said. Among those implications is that we misunderstand God's great gift of the Eucharist. The Church actually teaches us that Our Lord is sacramentally present in every particle of every host and in every drop of precious blood and not lessened in His presence despite the quantity. However, this misunderstanding reveals something much deeper than can be a real obstacle to true faith: we sometimes project our own deficiencies on God. The truth is that God does not give Himself halfway at all. He does not know how to do that. He does not fear to be vulnerable and is always humble. Let us respect this great gift of God by giving our entire selves to Him! In His joy, Reverend Father Daniel J. Gutierrez
