Dear family,

A while back I had heard my friend use a phrase which I find quite humorous: "Not my circus, not my monkeys." It is a funny little saying where someone expresses and establishes the fact that they are not responsible for a situation or set up. We all can relate to the feeling of relief we experience when we realize that any responsibility for some mess or monumental task is not ours to bear. However, in an individualistic culture growing more and more egotistical, we have to guard ourselves against indifference to the needs of our brothers and sisters among us. In today's Gospel Jesus makes it abundantly clear that we have an obligation to one another to keep each other accountable. This means that sometimes we have to speak up and act, even risking our popularity or the loss of good favor, to help and others avoid obvious pitfalls in their faith and life. While the Gospel will also call for personal responsibility, we are never called to be islands unto ourselves, after all, isn't this why Jesus created a church out of a community? None of us has the right to judge another's heart, but we can make a stand against immorality, scandal, hatred, bigotry, and sin. We were all called together to help each other on the way to heaven, on the way to fulfillment in Christ. Let us do our part in this great project of which we are all an important part!

In His joy,
Reverend Father Daniel J. Gutierrez
