pastor's Corner

Dear family,

It can be easy, in a world of negativity and so much disunity, to dismiss the possibilities described in today's readings. To hear that the apostolic community of early believers were able to share everything and be of one heart and mind seems like a silly pipe dream, certainly not something a mature adult should entertain. Indeed, if it were left to our own devices as humans, then yes, this picturesque community is lunacy. Yet, what the apostles were able to experience, what any of us are able to experience in heroic virtue and love is made possible by the resurrection. What makes our faith so powerful is not that we are only motivated by stories, but that we believe those stories to be our story. When theologians discuss the sacraments of the church, they always use the word "efficacious" to describe the real grace present and given to each Christian when receiving them. Easter is what makes them all efficacious, because when we receive Holy Communion and absolution, we receive the Risen Christ who has conquered death. This should give us confidence, that we are not only called to survive in our relationships, but to flourish when we draw upon the power of our God whom even the tomb could not keep contained. In His Joy, Father Daniel
