SIXTH SUNDAY OF EASTER

Enthusiasm

Enthusiasm is a wonderful word derived from a Greek word that refers to being inspired by God. Today, the word has come on hard times. Enthusiasm is often identified as an over-exuberant, unmoored emotion. Let us return to the original meaning of enthusiasm: the kind that is moored to and inspired by God, the kind that brings poise and buoyancy.

FIRST READING: Acts 8:5-8, 14-17 RESPONSORIAL PSALM: Psalm 66:1-3, 4-5, 6-7, 16, 20
SECOND READING: 1 Peter 3:15-18 GOSPEL: John 14:15-21

Comment

In today's Gospel, Jesus promises the Spirit. His words are part of the lengthy Last Supper discourse, which only John records. We can assume that as John assembled his Gospel, he chose to set these words of Jesus at the Last Supper. Their placement there heightens their importance and invites us to pay close attention. The discourse of Jesus becomes clearer after his death and resurrection. The Apostles needed time to absorb all that they had heard and seen. John goes out of his way to remind us of this at the end of his Gospel where he muses that if he were to write of everything Jesus did, there wouldn't be enough books in the world to contain what could be written (John 21:25).

But John does remember and record all we need. Through the inspiration of the Spirit, he writes about Jesus' promise of the Holy Spirit. The dreaded specter of the apostles losing Jesus was enough to sink them. The ominous signs of his demise were too fearful to think about. In the dark night that precedes the darker Good Friday, Jesus utters words of comfort. He promises to give his followers a Paraclete—a helper, advocate, or mediator. Jesus continues to assure the apostles that where the Paraclete is, there Jesus will be also. They will see this on the day he returns—the day of his resurrection, but also on that final day at the end of time.

Jesus' words here must be accepted by the apostles. It will take time for them to realize what Jesus means and how they are to respond. Jesus calls them to obedience. To obey means to listen deeply and to heed all he has commanded. Obedience is not slavish or uninformed. It is deeply felt and acted on.

The second reading gives us a string of successes. The Acts of the Apostles lists in headline fashion the miracles and marvels that are occurring throughout Galilee and Samaria. We read of the work of the deacon Philip in Samaria and of Peter and John. We detect an ordering of ministries. Philip the deacon baptizes; Peter and John journey from Galilee to Samaria to confer the Holy Spirit. God's grace is abundant, marvels abound; joy reaches a fever pitch. Clearly, the promised Spirit of God sent by Jesus is everywhere and everywhere effective. Clearly, the generosity of God is received by a grateful people.

We have good reason to imagine Peter as a mercurial kind of person. His denials of Jesus are threefold; his sorrow is deep. We remember stories of him: he does not want Jesus to wash his feet; then he wants Jesus to bathe him entirely. He leaps before he looks. He speaks before he thinks.

Nonetheless, Peter is the one Jesus chose to lead the rest. The Acts of the Apostles clearly depicts him as the leader. In the excerpt from his first letter that is today's second reading, we hear the sweet voice of reason. In this reading, he is anything but mercurial. This letter is one of the "catholic epistles." It is not addressed to a specific person or church as many of the epistles of the Christian Scriptures are. Scholars tell us that this letter was composed about 64 A.D. and was sent from Rome to Gentile Christians residing in northeast Asia Minor. These Christians were a beleaguered minority. The persecution they experienced was not the red hot kind. It was the cool and cruel kind that shunned, ostracized, teased. This kind of behavior can wear one down. Peter knows this, and offers sage, seasoned, comforting advice to his flock. He urges the sweet side of enthusiasm. He asks a lot of these Christians. He encourages inner strength, gentleness of manner and speech. He requests forbearance rather than retaliation. He asks of them an amazing resilience of soul drawn directly from their veneration of Christ, who is the Lord whom they are called to imitate.

Reflection

The promised Paraclete is as strongly among us as on the first day. The Church is as surely guided. It is incumbent upon us to deepen our awareness of the abiding Spirit. It falls to us during this Easter time to cultivate a deepening sense of that presence and then to act from that deep source. No other source will do for Christians. It is our vocation to follow.

Have YOU Been Listening to God's Call? Are You Open to A Leadership Role at St. Therese?

By now YOU are probably very aware that your parish is working toward being one family in Christ. We are praying that YOU are open to the possibility of presenting yourself for leadership in a new and exciting way and that YOU have been listening to hear God's call through the voices of our pastor, your fellow parishioners and the larger, local Church of Southeast Texas. This is the time for YOU to see how God has gifted YOU and how YOU will come to this new leadership call.

Two of the important gifts for a parishioner to bring to this challenge are

The gift of listening – the ability to be present for another and to understanding their hopes, needs and anxieties without judgment.

The gift of openness – the ability to set aside personal opinion or past experience for a time in order to explore new ideas, methods, and solutions.

How does a person know if he/she is gifted in this way? The first step is prayer. Then reflect on these:

Has my professional or personal life called me to be a good listener? Am I a counselor, social worker, therapist? Have I worked in customer service? Have I been a sponsor in a 12 step recovery program? Have I been a volunteer for Elijah's Place or some other grief support group? Have I worked on a suicide, battered woman or runaway hotline? Have I had special training in listening skills? Am I able to help another person clarify his/her position so that he/she is understood by a larger group? Can I withhold my thoughts long enough so that another person can express his/her thoughts? Can I let another speak without interrupting? Can I just be present without judgment or opinion?

Am I open and kind? Am I creative person who looks for new ways of doing things? Do I like new methods, technology? Do I travel, explore other cultures, new cuisines? Do I enjoy brainstorming as a way to find solutions? Am I flexible? Do my friends come from various socio-economic levels? Am I able to see both sides of an argument or political position? Do I try to get information before reaching a conclusion on a political controversy or community issue? Am I an artist, a musician, a writer? Am I able to see and value people's differences? Am I a bridge-builder?

Not every parishioner will have all of the gifts needed for this new challenge. However, with the Holy Spirit's guidance, together we will reflect these gifts as a unit. All that God is asking of YOU at this time is to consider your own gifts in light of what is needed. Often times, we do not see our own gifts. Now is a good time to carefully LISTEN to the nice things other people say to you about YOU. God may be pointing out your gifts through the positive words of others. Be
