33rd Sunday of Year B

Someone once asked his friend, if today is your last what will you do? The readings of today especially the first reading from the Book of Daniel and the Gospel of Mark that mirror each other challenge us with that question. The readings are talking about eschatology, which comes from the Greek word "eschatos," meaning "LAST." The readings remind us of our last day, and Jesus tells us in the gospel that we do not know that day. Over the years, there have been predictions of the day and time by some false prophets, or predictions due to some natural disasters, wars, and famous bad diseases like HIV, but we are still waking and sleeping.

I was never in the military and do not know much about the military. However, I heard that the military men and women always take the commands of their commander. If he or she tells them to turn 20 degrees, they would immediately turn 20 degrees. Our commander in our march towards heaven, our Lord Jesus Christ has already told us to turn towards God always, as well as what we need to be doing or avoiding as we, His soldiers march towards heaven. Given that we do not know the day or hour our last will come, all we need to do is to listen to our spiritual commander, Jesus Christ and take His commands serious. The readings are not supposed to frighten us. If we are genuinely soldiers of Christ, or ready to turn around and become true soldiers of Christ - people of peace, love, faith, and hope, today’s readings are words of comfort and encouragement to remain active on the things that bind us with Christ. So, let us continue to enjoy our life as Christ would like us to do, but at the same time be always prepared so that we shall joyfully tell the Lord on our last day that we did the right things, and then enjoy the kingdom He has already prepared for us.

Fr. Leo
