Last week the Saint Charles Borromeo students got excited about the Scholastic Book Fair! It was held in the Lower Parish Hall. The preview day was Monday, October 22, and days to shop were October 23, 24, 25, and 28. You could also order books online. Before the fair, I talked to several students. James Marrone, a fifth grader, said, “I am looking forward to the book fair. I am not looking for a specific book, but I like looking at new books, checking out book covers, and skimming through books that are out.” Olivia Majoros, a third grader, said that she “can’t wait to look at all the books and can’t wait to read Diary of a Wimpy Kid: The Meltdown, by Jeff Kinney.” Frances Popik, a seventh grader, said that she is “looking forward to finding new books, but not looking for a book in particular.” Mrs. Willrich was in charge of organizing the book fair this year. She told me that the book fair “is to encourage kids to read.” The proceeds from the book fair go “back to the school for what the school needs.” I think it is great that we have a book fair. I really enjoy the book fair when we go! Thank you to James Marrone, Olivia Majoros, and Frances Popik for answering questions about the book fair, and Mrs. Willrich for taking the time to be interviewed, and for the PTU for putting on our book fair!
