

Ms. Rowland, written by Sara Tenerowicz, published on November 11, 2018

On Wednesday September 26, 2018, I met Ms. Rowland, our new student teacher at St. Charles Borromeo School. A student teacher is a college student who is training to become a teacher. Part of their training is spent in an actual classroom for 15 weeks. Eventually the student teacher takes over the teaching in the classroom. Ms. Rowland is teaching in Mrs. Mog's third grade class. When she graduates from college, she wants to teach second or third grade students, so this assignment is a perfect fit. Her favorite subjects to teach are science and reading.

Ms. Rowland said that her favorite thing about Saint Charles Borromeo is how welcoming the students and teachers are here. She is not new to this area; Ms. Rowland went to high school at Normandy High School right here in Parma, Ohio, and went to college at Notre Dame College of Ohio.

When she is not teaching, her hobbies include knitting, crocheting, and painting. Her favorite author is Dr. Seuss, and her favorite food is seafood. Ms. Rowland's piece of advice for the students is don't be afraid to ask for help, because teachers will be there to help students.

After interviewing Ms. Rowland, I feel that the students in third grade are lucky to have her as a student teacher because she is extremely friendly and kind. Based on my interview I think she will make an excellent teacher. On behalf of all the students, faculty and staff at St. Charles Borromeo, we welcome you and hope you enjoy the rest of your student teaching here at Saint Charles School, Ms. Rowland!

