“Then, after singing a hymn, they went to the Mount of Olives”

Thank you! Two words that, when said sincerely, say so much to the person who hears them and much more about the person who speaks them. They acknowledge the existence of someone other than ourselves and they communicate to that person we are aware of an act or words that benefit us; an act or words restrained that might have caused us harm or pain; an act or words of instruction, caution or reprimand that have made us a better person.

Thank you! Two words that make others feel accepted and appreciated. Yet, they are two words that often go unspoken because we assume people know we mean or intend them. At the Last Supper Jesus left for us a Memorial of His love. He blessed bread and wine and said Thank you! to the Father. He gave the disciples, and us, His Body and Blood as a New Covenant. He taught us to say Thank you! to God for all He has given to us and to all who love us as He did. Do we say Thank you! enough? Try it, you'll like it! thank you for reading and reflecting on these

TODAYS REFLECTION

THE ULTIMATE BLOOD SACRIFICE

To truly understand what Jesus did at the climax of his life—and what the Catholic Church does at every Mass—we must understand the importance of blood sacrifice to Judaism in Jesus' time. Everything that Moses did at Mt. Sinai, and all that was done for a thousand years in the temple, was summed up by Christ's ultimate blood sacrifice on the Cross, offered for the reconciliation of God and humanity. And this ultimate lifeblood of God, sprinkled by Christ the high priest once for all, is what the Mass re-presents and makes sacramentally present to us.

For this feast of the Body and Blood of the Lord, I reflect on the Mass as a sacrifice. Sacrificial language runs right through all of our readings for today, just as it runs through the whole of Israelite history. In Jesus' sacrifice on the cross, God's fidelity unto death finally meets a human obedience unto death--and in that meeting, the covenant is fully realized, and salvation is accomplished. The Mass is the re-presenting of that world-changing event.

The Church comes from the Eucharist for it is the sacrifice that makes saints. The Eucharist is essentially the fullest act of gratitude prefigured in Melchizedek finding its fulfillment in the sacrifice of Christ. Every Mass is a participation in and celebration of this sacrifice, but the feast of Corpus Christi is a time to be especially aware of the gift of the Eucharist.
