WE ARE CALLED TO LOVE

The love of Jesus Christ that leads to his willing embrace of the crucified earthly destiny that appeared before him is both a model for how we are called to love and a revelation of God's self-offering of control out of love. This model for how you and I are to love is not an invitation to masochism or some sort of foolhardy and dangerous behavior. Instead, it is an example of our willingness to accept both the suffering and the joy that comes with love. This revelation of God's self-offering or sacrifice of control tells us a great deal about who Jesus Christ is and what God is like.

Sunday's Reflections

2 Corinthians 5:17-21

AMBASSADORS FOR CHRIST

Through the sacrament of reconciliation, we confess our sins and experience the mercy that God alone can give. Through the ministry of the church, we are reconciled to God and one another. The priest, our intermediary, expresses the forgiveness of God, represents the forgiving community, and steers the wandering ship of our souls to the safe shores of peace.

We believe that God created the earth in goodness. Sin entered the world, and God keeps us at peace through the ministry of reconciliation.

In a letter to the Corinthians, Paul says that he himself was reconciled to God through Christ, and that he was given the ministry of reconciliation. God reconciled the world in Christ and continued the work of reconciliation through Paul and other apostles, making them ambassadors of the forgiving Christ. On behalf of Christ, Paul pleads, “be reconciled to God.”

As we become more aware of our faults this Lent, we bring our sorrow to the church through the sacrament of reconciliation. Then, forgiven by Christ, we too become ambassadors for him. We carry the message of reconciliation to all that we meet.

Lent is not just about seeking forgiveness for ourselves, but also about building reconciliation wherever ties were broken. Wherever we can, let us bring the peace of Christ to all we meet at home, at work, at school, in our streets—all around the world.
