Pastor's Corner

In life perhaps the greatest challenge is to be at peace with ourselves. This is only possible if we have first made our peace with God of course. In our first reading today we see God staying Job's complaining. God basically says to Job and his comforters, "I am God and you are not. If you wish to be pleasing to me, simply be what I intended you to be." We must accept life's challenges and allow ourselves to be "stretched" by these challenges. We trust in God, the author and sustainer of all and, if we are at peace with Him, we will be happy.

God, whom we know as our loving Father will help us over all obstacles. In the gospel we see how anxious the apostles were when the great wind blew up on the lake. He quiets the storm and He quells their fear. God is ultimately in control of our lives. We should always strive to be one with Him if we are to be at peace with ourselves – and by extension our neighbor. In God then we have a most wonderful Father. I wish all good fathers, those who strive to reflect God's love in the lives of their children, a truly happy Father's Day. God bless you all.

Stewardship Reflection

In today's second reading Paul says that Jesus has brought us new life, however, a life that makes the "flesh," earthly existence, secondary. In last week's Second Reading Paul assured us that "We walk by faith, and not by sight." It is this deep faith to which he refers again in this week's reading, telling us "So whoever is in Christ is a new creation; the old things have passed away; behold, new things have come." We have just finished the Easter season recently. We are called to new life. We are called to discipleship and stewardship.

Stewardship of Treasure

Our Catholic commitment presents itself in three vital areas of vibrant parish life. We use our time and our talent and our treasure to praise the Lord and further His works in our community. Right now (see church support figures above) St. Bridget's is pulling its weight whereas St. Bernard's is lagging behind somewhat in its responsibilities. A hole is being dug that will be difficult to fill by the end of the fiscal year on June 30th. I thank the generous and responsible stewards among us and ask the others to please contribute a little and help us to fill in that hole. I'll give a little more myself and ask that others might follow suit. Those who never give might want to start now – it brings a lot of joy. Fr. W

Children's Envelopes: Many people at both parishes have asked about these recently. They are available at St. Bridget's. We have ordered envelopes for St. Bernard's. Teach your children to give and be participating members.

Happy Father's Day!

A father gives to his children a great gift by truly loving his wife and leading her to Christ.

A father looks into the eyes of his children with love.

A father corrects his children out of love, not out of anger.

A father is an example of holiness, peace, kindness, gentleness, encouragement and strength of character.

A father teaches his children the value of life.

A father teaches his daughters to be ladies and his sons to be gentlemen.

A father looks to God as his source of strength.
