My Dear Parish Family,

As we recall, this liturgical period we know as Ordinary Time is not called that because the season is plain or unremarkable but rather that we take a systematic, orderly and somewhat sequential journey through one of the Gospels. If we compare the events of last week's passage from Mark's gospel to those of this week we see that Jesus' proclamation of the Kingdom of God was anything but systematic and orderly. What a difference a day or two and a few miles makes!

You will recall that last week when Jesus was on the far side of the lake huge crowds followed his every move while he healed the woman's hemorrhaging and raised Jairus' daughter to life. The people were utterly astounded! In today's passage, the same Jesus, now back in his home town, is greeted not with astonishment but yawns and contempt. "Isn't that Mary's boy, Jesus? Who does he think he is anyway?" To them, Jesus is too familiar to be anyone special. In their categorical knowledge of his human identity (his parents and relations) they dismiss the possibility that Jesus is anything more than he appears to be – a carpenter's son.

The other more important element that differentiates these two passages is faith. Jairus and the woman had it. Jesus' hometown friends did not. Believe it or not that difference impacts God's ability to intervene miraculously "So he was not able to perform any mighty deed there." Consider that for a moment. A lack of faith can thwart God's ability to heal his people. It seems that Jesus works more miracles when enough faith is present so that the miracle will fortify and augment that faith. Contrasting these successive passages in Mark's gospel leaves us with a few points to ponder. Have I been too quick to pass judgment on my close friends and family because of familiarity and possibly missed what God was trying to teach me through them? Has my lack of faith in God's providence limited God's intentions for my healing?

We still have a long ride through Mark's gospel before we get to the climax. There will be more ups and downs but in the long run, that is okay. Remember, we know how the story ends.

Peace of Christ,
Deacon Bruce
