Second Sunday of Lent March 1, 2015

La Historia y Usted: Segundo Domingo de Cuaresma En ese momento de una luz cegadora, vieron a Jesús como realmente era. Transfigurado. Deslumbrante. Y charlando con Elías y Moisés sí mismos. Los apóstoles no quieren salir de la montaña.

Ellos no quieren establecer sus caras a Jerusalén, y la cruz cuyo haz vertical ya fue golpeado en la espera en el Calvario. Ellos habían estado con él, por supuesto, cuando curó a los endemoniados, y el leproso. Él había venido a ellos en el agua durante ese terrorífico tormenta medianoche. Incluso se había alimentado de cinco mil con unos pocos panes y peces. Estaban envueltos en el misterio y la maravilla de todo. Pero ahora que lo vieron como realmente era, lleno de luz, y lleno de gracia. Tenían una visión del reino.

¿Alguna vez se siente el reino cuando se observa a la gente? Me encanta ver como vienen adelante en la procesión de la Comunión. Como observó Thomas Merton, no tienen idea de que están brillando como el sol. Hay algo sobre el punto de la vulnerabilidad en las personas que, al igual que la grieta en un florero, deja pasar la luz en.

Aquí viene la adolescente torpe, subiéndose los pantalones y empujando hacia atrás su cabello. Detrás de él es su hermana serena y hermosa, la presentación de la faz de la confianza y la calma que ella practicaba tan duro delante del espejo antes de la Misa. No tienen idea de lo brillantes que brillan.

Aquí es el líder de la parroquia, el que organiza y motiva y sirve. Y está el recién llegado, seguro, con llegado, seguro, con demasiada frecuencia no bienvenido, hambriento y lleno de esperanza. Cómo brillante es su luz.

Usted no puede verlo, pero la radiación que sale de ustedes es casi cegadora.

Esta semana, se bendijo al observar la luz que viene de la gente en su vida.

The Story and You: Second Sunday in Lent

In that moment of blinding light, they saw Jesus as he truly was. Transfigured. Dazzling. And chatting with Elijah and Moses themselves. The apostles didn't want to leave the mountain. They didn't want to set their faces to Jerusalem, and the cross whose vertical beam was already pounded in and waiting on Calvary.

They had been with him, of course, when he cured the demoniacs, and the leper. He had come to them on the water during that terrifying midnight storm. He had even fed five thousand with a few loaves and fish. They were enveloped in the mystery and wonder of it all.

But now they saw him as he truly was, full of light, and full of grace. They had a glimpse into the kingdom.

Do you ever sense the kingdom when you observe people? I love to watch them as they come forward in the Communion procession. As Thomas Merton observed, they have no idea that they are shining like the sun. There is something about the point of vulnerability in people that, like the crack in a vase, lets the light in.

Here comes the awkward teenage boy, pulling up his pants and pushing back his hair. Behind him is his poised and beautiful sister, presenting the face of confidence and composure that she practiced so hard in front of the mirror before Mass. They have no idea how brightly they glow. Here is the parish leader, the one who organizes and motivates and serves. And there is the newcomer, unsure, too often unwelcomed, hungry and hope-filled. How brilliant is their light.

You can't see it, but the radiation coming out of you is almost blinding.

This week, be blessed by observing the light that comes from the people in your life.

PARISH EVALUATION

As part of an Archdiocesan effort to see how our parishes are doing, we have been charged with conducting a Parish Planning Evaluation, which will take place over the next several months. All parishes in the Archdiocese are required to participate in the evaluation, regardless of size or location. In this first phase of the process, we are asking everyone to complete a general survey about the parish and your Mass attendance. We will have the survey available as a bulletin insert, or you may find a link on our website at www.srldenver.org on our homepage. The link will take you to the form which can be completed online. The survey is very brief, so please take a few moments to complete the form so that we will have accurate data to report and evaluate. Thank you so much for taking the time to participate in the survey!
