A Word from Father...

Dear Friends,

Ah, the Sign of Peace! So lovely yet so misunderstood!

Last week, I wrote a bit about its possible origins in the early Christian communities and its meaning, that the "shalom" that the Jewish Christians extended to one another was more than a happy little greeting, sort of like, "How's it goin'? Great!" Rather, the "Shalom" was that of Jesus, a blessing and a prayer that the other might be right with God, right with others, right with self, whole and holy, already experiencing the peace of God's Kingdom.

The key thing for me is that the Kiss of Peace was...and is...a prayer and a blessing, not a social greeting. In the context of the Mass, when I extend to another the "Peace of Christ" and s/he returns that Peace to me, we are praying for one another and blessing one another. It is NOT a "Hi, how are ya!" moment, but a solemn and serious extension of Jesus' resurrection Peace, his "Shalom", to the other and the reception of that same gift from the other. Some of the Byzantine churches emphasize this reality by enfolding the hands of the other into my hands as I say "Peace to you", then the other enfolding my hands into theirs as they speak the blessing. There is no waving, chatting, laughing, yukking it up that feels more like a recess from prayer rather than a continuation of our liturgical prayer; to the contrary. That Byzantine way of sharing the Lord's Peace is a beautiful gesture that makes present and real the very Peace of Christ to the other and to me. The Roman way is similar; watch Pope Francis on EWTN at some special Mass at St. Peter's Basilica: he places his arms over the arms of the other even as the other does the same to him, and they gently touch or even sometimes kiss the other's cheek.

So how should we Catholics in 2016 America offer to one another the Sign of Peace? Well, at this stage in my life I'm not so big into a rule for everything; it doesn't really matter to me if it is a handshake, an embrace, a kiss, or some other gesture (enfolded hands?). What is important is that it be a prayer and a blessing one for the other. It is not recess. It is not time for gabbing and joking. It is not time for "Hi, how are ya's."

So here are a few suggestions:

- Don't run around the church trying to "get" everyone. Stay in place and just offer the Peace to those nearest you.
- Think of it always as a blessing you are giving them and that they return to you.
- No jokes, no gabbing, no chatting, no "Hi...it's so good to see you!'s"

Anyway, this is my last word on the subject (for now!): Peace be with you!

Fr. Kevin
