THE GREATEST STORY EVER TOLD

by Father Dougherty

In 1993, William Bennett, the former Secretary of Education under President Reagan, put together an anthology of short stories and fables in The Book of Virtues. He wanted to re-present many of the timeless classics like Aesop's "The Tortoise and the Hare" and other fables that taught wisdom and virtue. He saw in these stories a way to reset our nation's moral compass and ensure our children (and we ourselves) are morally literate.

Stories with messages make a lot of sense. We're attracted to them usually because they entertain. We learn from them because they challenge us to find an often hidden message within them and figure out what that message may have to do with us. The unfortunate drawback is that these stories, fables, and parables often lose their power to communicate with each telling. As with "The Three Little Pigs" or "Goldilocks", they become too familiar and are often disregarded as time-worn or even irrelevant.

This cannot be said of what has often been named as referred to as "the greatest story ever told." The passion accounts we will hear once again on Palm Sunday from the Gospels of Matthew (this year), Mark, and Luke, and the Gospel of John on Good Friday, defy the challenge of time and predictability. As with any story, the Passion of Our Lord might be thought to be boring, the same-old, boring, unbelievable, etc. Yet, it only becomes so if we let it.

The story of the Savior's Passion and Death, handed on from the apostles and ever taught by the Church through Sacred Tradition and Sacred Scripture, is simply the most profoundly captivating story ever told because it plumbs the depths of God's interest in us. It provides a response to the yearning in the human soul where one can find hope full of immortality (Wisdom 3). It has personal relevance necessarily for everyone who has ever lived.

In that story, one may find "romance, glory, honor, fidelity, and the true way of all loves on earth, and more than that" (J.R.R. Tolkien). It is about God; it is about you. The yearly recounting of how God loved us will help us, as the focus of our prayer and meditation, keep our love for God alive and prepare us for Holy Week in new ways.

The scriptural accounts of how Jesus willed his suffering and death can amaze us if we pray about and with them. The crown of thorns, the nails, the purple cloth adorning the simple wooden cross at the foot of our altar frame a story that continues to give us new reasons to love Him with all of our hearts.

The crucifix above the altar, the altar itself, and the Holy Eucharist speak with eloquence about God's great affection for you. Ever vivid, always profound, never hackneyed, the greatest story ever told is the reason itself for our prayer and devotion.
